The Real Aid for Back Pain

the lumbar spine is straightened and the body weight is carried by the spine structures. The muscles relax, however, the intradiscal pressure is increased. In plain language – you adopt an unhealthy sitting position.

Moreover, the Bambach saddle seat supports blood circulation of the tissue and the musculature. Furthermore, long and undynamic sitting causes congestions in the venous and lymphatic system leading to a pressure increase, which in the long run may end in an increased activity of the pain receptors. Long sitting decreases HDL (high density lipoproteins) and rises the cholesterol level thus promoting the development of arteriosclerosis respectively thrombosis in the long term (van der Ploeg et al, 2012). For this reason, the working place should be designed as ergonomically as possible in order to guarantee an optimally healthy working position.

The Bambach saddle seat is a clever solution to this problem and in addition it is very practical in handling. The seat is not only adjustable in height, but also the inclination angle can be adjusted individually. By this, the seat keeps the pelvis tilted forward without stress on the knees by the body weight thus avoiding an unhealthy protective position. A sitting position with the pelvis tilted forward provokes the upright posture of the natural lumbar spine curvature thus reducing the pressure to the vertebral disk. Studies with children and rehabilitation patients prove that sitting with the pelvis tilted forward facilitates the function of the upper extremities. A dental study (Ganadavadi et al, 2005) reveals that the failure rate in a sitting position with bent over pelvis is reduced, simultaneously skillfulness is increased.

The work of a dental professional requires a lot of concentration and precision. The limited working area of the mouth often forces us into an unnatural and stiff working position. The Bambach® saddle seat (Hager & Werken) has recognized and solved this problem.

After extensive and difficult treatments, I used to suffer from back pain resulting from the natural protective function of the body against the unnatural sitting position. Did you know that a bent over sitting position causes a pressure to the intervertebral disk equivalent to carrying heavy weights? In a sitting position, the requirements of our musculoskeletal system do change considerably. We principally try to adopt a (protective) position by tilting back of the pelvis for compensation of the femoral musculature tension. By this position,
